

Why Are We Even Having This Discussion?

For this cause God gave them up unto vile affections: for even their women did change the natural use into that which is against nature: And likewise also the men, leaving the natural use of the woman, burned in their lust one toward another; men with men working that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was meet.

--Romans 1:26-27; King James Version

Just when you thought it couldn't any get stranger . . .
It does.

Last week I received a news item forwarded to me by an individual in Australia who sends out daily batches of articles gathered from across the world.

I couldn't believe my eyes when I read the title: "Diversity & Sex with Animals: Does Shame Have a Future?"

Then I came upon two subheads within the article that read: "Sex With Animals" and "Man/Boy Sex Is Fine."

At first I thought the accompanying text would most likely bear out that these topics were the twisted creation of a debauched, unstable mind, but, instead, I found out that the major proponent of this sordid "philosophical discussion" was none other than Peter Singer, the Ira W. DeCamp professor at Princeton's Center for Human Values.

Isn't it rich that a PhD., in the employ of some thinktank called the Center for Human Values, would think it perfectly fine that humans and animals could have sexual congress? Where's the human value in that arrangement?

But, oh yes, I must admit there was one very firm caveat attached to this kind of union and it was voiced by the leadership of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA). The organization was quite concerned that if this human-animal sex thing was going to happen that it not hurt the animals.

The exact wording was that the union was "daring and honest, and it does not do what some people read into it, which is condone any violent acts involving an animal, sexual or otherwise."

Are you serious?

Let me get this straight: We humans should be concerned about damage done to animals as a result of bestiality?

What about the sick psyche of any human who would consent to—let alone desire—this type of relationship? You think humans might not be a bit damaged themselves for willingly engaging in such an exchange. Maybe they are the ones who need some help?

But, nah, let's worry about the animals.

And, by the way, why are we even discussing the ground rules for such an act? Doesn't such scrutiny actually legitimize this sordidness?

Singer, a major proponent of depopulation—a fact that should not be overlooked when discussing his promotion of bestiality—states that all the taboos about sex have fallen except for those with animals. Bestiality is fine, he too believes, as long as the animal is not hurt.

Now with regard to the idea of sex between men and boys, consider this:

In 1999, the American Psychological Association published a study indicating that pedophilia can have a positive influence on a child. According to the study, the use of “judgmental terms” such as “child abuse, molestation” and “victims” must be eliminated.

Instead, we should use neutral, value-free terms like “adult-child sex.” We should not talk about the “severity of the abuse,” but instead refer to “the level of sexual intimacy.”

Then there is media events—one of which was carried by WGBH, a Boston PBS affiliate—that depict graphically, and in a sanctioning light, not only homosexual sex, but the adult-child sex union in a favorable light.

In 2000, the “At Home” section of the Boston Globe published an article which advised mothers to teach their children “the mechanics of sex.”

In 2001, Boston Magazine ran a long, two-part story about the North American Man/Boy Love Association in which it was empathetically stated that man/boy love was dead and no one need worry about it anymore. This in the face of an American Psychiatric Association release that stated: “Some [pedophiles] develop complicated techniques for gaining access to children. They may select a job, hobby or volunteer work that brings them into contact with children.”

This is real information that is not being shared with the public.

The cretins that rule this world do not want you awakened to what is going on behind your back. Therefore, researchers like myself, and a newspaper with the courage such as this one, have to partner together to alert you folks to that what is going on.

Don’t think that meaningful research—the information which is not covered by mainstream news because it is owned by the global powers that do not want scrutinizing light shed upon these issues—will prevail in the court of public opinion by itself. Only when all of you start getting the information out to your local communities will we stop such a sinister trend in its tracks.

You evangelicals who sit every week in your pews and hear the word preached but have no idea of what’s going on outside those doors, please consider what I’ve written.

Life in service to Christ is a participatory endeavor. As scripture states: Service is your reasonable sacrifice. The times, however, demand that you render it now.

The globalists are highjacking homosexuality because they don’t want natural unions that beget children. What they want is massive depopulation. That is also why bestiality is now being formally introduced into society. And, watch closely, because this poison will find subtly find its way into the public education system.

So, folks, get off your butts because right now the wolves are skulking about you and your children.

And in whom or what are you placing your trust?

Politicians? Law enforcement? Teachers?

People get ready because this garbage is coming to a neighborhood near you.
