

The PTB and Illegal Immigration

The notion behind illegal immigration, as held by its proponents, is that since it's gone on so long why not just grant everybody citizenship?

Using that rationale, we ought to decriminalize grand larceny, murder and any other illegal activity since they've all gone on so long and are likely to continue.

Latinos, especially, are taking this nation's resistance to illegal immigration very personally because they are the very people who are most involved. They are quick to make it an ethnic and racial issue (depending on how Latinos wish to be classified, a designation that has changed through the decades) because it is predominately European-Americans who are objecting.

Personally, I couldn't care from what countries the illegal immigration is coming (and certainly other countries are involved as well). I'm thinking: if the immigrants are illegal, they're illegal. That's it.

Now we all know that illegal immigration accelerated since the eighties. It's not a Sonny Boy Bush issue, or a Clinton issue, or a Daddy Bush issue, or a Reagan issue. All of them were in office while this was going on. All of them looked the other way.

That's because Presidents do as they're told, and they were that told illegal immigration must take place. The objective? To allow rampant immigration to do its part in the planned destruction of the United States, which is designed to render the nation incapable of resisting a one-world government.

The other part of the destruction will take place on the battlefields of Eurasia where our troops—which are being used by the global elites to take care of the “Arab problem”—will eventually be ambushed and decimated by Russian, Chinese, and Moslem forces.

This has happened throughout history. Napoleon and Hitler were prime examples.

The Powers That Be raise up a scourging force, cut it loose on a continent, and when the invaders have done their job—terrorizing nations into obsequiousness and making the bankers and industrialists a lot of money—the scourgers are turned on.

The Powers That Be—those global elites whose families have spent generations preparing the world to accept a global government—are behind the forced illegal immigration.

You might have noticed the heavy flow of immigrants is from underdeveloped nations. The countries into which they are flooding are historically industrialized, prosperous Western nations both in Europe and North America as well as the island continent of Australia.

Don't see millions breaking their necks to get into Bangladesh, Chad or China, do you?

This shifting of populations is part of the elites' plan to weaken the strong nations by giving the have-nots a little more, until, ultimately, the playing field is evened so that all people can be treated equally. And they will be. Equally like dogs.

The Powers That Be—through their blueprint for global totalitarianism known as the Manifesto of the Communist Party—are implementing the redistribution of wealth, which is what we are seeing right now.

But forced illegal immigration is accomplishing a number of other objectives critical to the ruination of nations:

It seeks to alter a nation's culture. In former decades, an immigrant people assimilated into the culture. Nowadays the nation bends its culture so as not to offend each of the immigrant peoples.

It reshapes a nation's demographics to give power to the new wave of immigrants.

It diminishes a nation's sovereignty. As we see happening in Europe and elsewhere, a nation's laws are altered because of the presence of other nationalities and religions. These alterations abet the implementation of international laws and standards the globalists have implemented through the United Nations and its ever-multiplying non-governmental organizations.

Lastly, forced immigration in the face of a nation's contracting economy will eventually create internal strife to the point of bloodshed.

When this occurs, the U.N. will send in troops and institute martial law.

With our troops engaged in a spreading aggression in Eurasia, the U.N. troops will enter this country and, as Kissinger smugly commented 14 years ago, Americans will welcome them.

The tragedy of it all is that the immigrants—mostly Latinos from Mexico and Central America—who have been entering our nation illegally are only looking for a better way of life, which is understandable. Unbeknownst to them, however, they are being used as pawns just as U.S. citizens are.

And at the core of this conspiracy is the PTB's success at keeping hundreds of nations underdeveloped, despite so many of them possessing untold wealth in natural resources.

These nations have been kept in a third-world status for the globalists' purposes. The resources, especially in the nations of sub-Saharan Africa and South America, have always been tapped and controlled by the cabal's international corporations.

I mean, don't you have to ask yourself what in the world happened—or didn't happen—in Mexico, a once thriving republic that is also rife with natural resources, that their citizens would be forced to leave?

Global economics is a rigged deal. It always has been. And now this skewed system will be used to bring the world to chaos through war, deprivation and desperation.

Illegal immigration is just the beginning, and you can bet that no matter what solution those worthless whores in the District of Criminals come up with, illegal immigration will continue until the developed nations' resources and ability to sustain its population is stretched beyond the breaking point.

We are all being used, and we will continue to be, until people wake up and find out who's really pulling the strings on this Earth.
