

Stalag Amerika – Part Three

Ever hear of Rex 84?

No, it's not the name of a dinosaur.

It is, however, a code name for a program that was allegedly run as an exercise between April 5 through 13 in 1984.

Reportedly, the organizations involved were the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), Department of Defense, Central Intelligence Agency, Secret Service, Treasury, Federal Bureau of Investigation, and Veterans Administration.

On the Wikipedia free encyclopedia website (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Rex_84), it states that Rex 84 was “a gaming exercise to test military assistance in civil defense.

“The exercise anticipated civil disturbances, major demonstrations and strikes that would affect continuity of government and/or resource mobilization. To fight subversive activities, there was authorization for the military to implement government ordered movements of civilian populations at state and regional levels, the arrest of certain unidentified segments of the population, and the imposition of martial rule.”

The reality of this scenario was given added credibility when further revelations were published in a Miami Herald story written by Alfonso Chardy in July 5, 1987:

“About the same time, North completed his transfer to the NSC [National Security Council] from the Marine Corps. Those who worked with North in 1981 remember his first assignments as routine, although not unimportant.

“North, they recalled, was briefly assigned to carry the ‘football,’ the briefcase containing the secret contingency plans for fighting a nuclear war, which is taken everywhere the president goes. North later widened his assignment to cover national crisis contingency planning. In that capacity he became involved with the controversial national crisis plan drafted by the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

“From 1982 to 1984, North assisted FEMA, the U.S. government's chief national crisis-management unit, in revising contingency plans for dealing with nuclear war, insurrection or massive military mobilization.

“North's involvement with FEMA set off the first major clash between the official government and the advisers and led to the formal letter of protest in 1984 from then-Attorney General [William French] Smith.

“Smith was in Europe last week and could not be reached for comment. But a government official familiar with North's collaboration with FEMA said then-Director Louis O. Guiffrida, a close friend of [Edwin] Meese, mentioned North in meetings during that time as FEMA's NSC contact.

“Guiffrida could not be reached for comment, but FEMA spokesman Bill McAda confirmed the relationship.

““Officials of FEMA met with Col. North during 1982 to 1984,” McAda said. ““These meetings were appropriate to Col. North's duties with the National Security Council and FEMA's responsibilities in certain areas of national security.’

“FEMA's clash with Smith occurred over a secret contingency plan that called for suspension of the Constitution, turning control of the United States over to FEMA, appointment of military commanders to run state and local governments and declaration of martial law during a national crisis.

“The plan did not define national crisis, but it was understood to be nuclear war, violent and widespread internal dissent or national opposition against a military invasion abroad.”

Fast forwarding to post 9-11 times, Jerry Markon wrote in the Sept. 10, 2005 edition of The Washington Post, in an article entitled “U.S. Can Confine Citizens Without Charges, Court Rules,” the following:

“A federal appeals court yesterday backed the president's power to indefinitely detain a U.S. citizen captured on U.S. soil without any criminal charges, holding that such authority is vital during wartime to protect the nation from terrorist attacks.”

My question is what wartime are we talking about?

Who declared war?

Why are we in our fourth consecutive war never to be declared such by Congress as provided for and demanded by our Constitution?

And why haven't we said a word in protest?

As you have read in earlier articles, the idea of mass detention of United States citizens has been around for a while.

In fact, it has been around since the close of World War 2, after we cut loose all those dangerous Japanese-Americans whose only fault, as it was discovered, was to be born of Asian lineage.

In subsequent articles, we will see that, in the early fifties, the draconian desire by some in power to deprive U.S. citizens of their rights had returned under the guise of the pernicious Internal Security Act, a piece of legislation that became so twisted that even its sponsor, Pat McCarran—whose name was lent to the act's alternative title—decided the language was way too over the top for even his liking and protested its “concentration-camp measures.”

Unfortunately, we are embarking on that slippery slope again. This time the stakes have been jacked up higher than ever before.

Are we in danger of terrorist acts?

Yes.

But our government, regardless of the parties that gain supposed power from administration to administration, has become corrupt.

And so have those governing bodies of all other nations.

For those of you who read the Bible, have you not understood that we are seeing the quickening of the days that will lead to the Great Tribulation?

What did Jesus say about Caesar's government?

Why is our government any different? Or that of any other land?

You think this regime is righteous because the whore of the False Prophet—the mainstream news agencies—told you that our President was a Christian without your ever hearing anything from his own mouth that demonstrated in the least a heart and head knowledge of The Word.

It's a complete Hollywood fabrication.

And so many of you are swallowing it hook, line, and sinker.

That's because you are a victim of intellectual conceit or deceit.

Either you don't think you can be fooled because you're a voracious consumer of mainstream crap and therefore you believe you're aptly informed or, simply, you just don't care.

Either way, you're asleep to the fact that it is happening here.
